

HEALTH AND SAFETY POLICY

06 January 2019

Oiltech Bearings is committed to the Health and Safety of all of its employees and anyone that may be affected by its activities, so they do not put their own health and safety at risk. Oiltech Bearings recognises that effective health and safety management can contribute positively towards business performance and will help to promote a positive working environment for the whole workforce.

To ensure success Oiltech Bearings will:

- Meet, and where possible exceed, legal requirements.
- Provide suitable and sufficient information, instruction, training and supervision to its staff so as to ensure their health and safety.
- Control workplace hazards, by assessing risks and establishing risk control measures to eliminate or reduce the risk to staff and all other persons.
- Provide and maintain all health and safety equipment required by its employee's and visitors.
- Provide safe and well maintained equipment to use.
- Ensure all staff are aware of their legal duties and encourage their support in health and safety matters.
- Actively monitor and review health and safety performance and measures.
- Communicate effectively to all staff a structured plan for identified improvements against a proposed schedule that the company will execute.

Patrick Chester
Managing Director